

Recent Past Preservation Network

www.recentpast.org

Third Church of Christ, Scientist and Christian Science Monitor Complex, by I.M. Pei & Partners, 1968-1971. This complex of two buildings is threatened with demolition. Prominently sited at Sixteenth and I streets, N.W., two blocks north of the White House, the buildings are an important example of the signature style by which the Pei firm gained international prominence in the 1960s and early 1970s. Araldo Cossutta was partner in charge at the firm for this design. Photograph courtesy Richard Longstreth.

RPPN promotes preservation education and activism to encourage a contextual understanding of our modern built environment.

The RPPN website features hundreds of photographs, full-text state and federal historic nominations for structures less than fifty years old, and the latest preservation news for all fans of the recent past.

We help you save buildings!

Tell us your story at submit@recentpast.org

Founded 2000